

The fund was up 8.3% this quarter, meaningfully outperforming its benchmark of FTSE World Index (up 5.1%). The fund outperformed its benchmark over the past year, returning 56.5% (versus the benchmark 55.7%).

With the pandemic market shock now a year behind us, we are pleased with the extent of our fund's rebound and its continued outperformance of the market. The shock was unexpected and materially changed the economic outlook and the prospects for the companies and economies in which we invest. At the time of the shock, we raised a little extra cash, assessed the new prospects for our holdings and other potential options and pivoted the portfolio accordingly. In particular at this juncture, we took a very conservative stance on balance sheet risk, focused on cashflow generation and favoured the better management teams. As always, we are guided by the price the market offers us relative to future company cashflow prospects.

Economic backdrop

Rapid rollout programs of very effective vaccines are underway in the USA, the UK and Israel, with other rich countries accelerating after slow starts. This increases the probability of a faster return to more normal activity in those regions, limiting further scarring in services sectors (particularly tourism and leisure). Unfortunately, several less wealthy nations are enduring another Covid-19 surge, accompanied by very slow vaccine rollout programs. This is delaying their economic recoveries. It appears that the rate of vaccine rollouts is insufficient to quell the virus worldwide and, with mutations arising where the virus is raging, it's likely that negative economic effects are likely to endure for an extended period. Uncertainty remains high.

Positively, the global economy entered the crisis in a strong position, with healthy consumer dynamics in most developed markets and a moderating, but still strongly growing, Chinese economy. Developed market consumer and corporate health appears to have been largely preserved through extensive and ongoing fiscal and monetary support. In the USA, the level of fiscal support has increased further this year and will be a positive and enduring boost for the global economy. Consumers have fared better than initially expected and increased cumulative savings (from less spend during lockdowns and direct forms of fiscal stimulus) bodes well for future consumption under more normal conditions. Nevertheless, enduring economic conditions may be visible only when fiscal support and monetary stimulus tapers off and the reality of permanent job losses manifests.

Following a rapid resumption of economic activity back to pre-crisis levels, the Chinese economy is once again growing strongly. This is largely due to the successful early containment of the pandemic, government stimulus (which boosted infrastructure investment in particular) and surprisingly strong exports and manufacturing (buoyed by temporary Covid-19-related goods demand). This is despite continued lackluster consumer confidence and spending. However, pre-crisis risks remain: a disruptive moderation and rebalancing of economic growth (away from fixed asset investments and towards consumption) and potential further deterioration in geopolitical relations.

The medium-term outlook for emerging economies is extremely varied at present, with differing exposures to volatile energy prices (importers vs exporters), strong commodity prices, the decimated tourism industry and differing impacts from the management of the pandemic and efficacy of vaccine rollouts. Due to recovering domestic demand and some signs of increased inflation, policy interest rates are beginning to normalize higher from extraordinarily low crisis levels.

Market review

Global markets were strong again this quarter (up 5.0% in US dollars), with the USA up 6.2%, France up 5.3% and the UK up 6.1%. Within emerging markets (up 2.3% in dollar terms), South Africa (up 12.3%) and Russia (up 5.0%) outperformed, while Turkey (down 20.2%) and Brazil (down 10.6%) lagged. Over the last twelve months global equity markets have recovered very strongly from the March 2020 lows (up 54.8% overall).

Extremely high developed market fiscal and monetary stimulus, which are being sustained (and in the case of the USA increased) into the recovery phase, are providing a powerful support for financial markets and have led to dramatic increases in general asset prices. We expect increased volatility when fiscal stimulus inevitably wanes, if inflation emerges at last and when interest rates rise from their extremely low levels.

Fund performance and positioning

Our equity holdings contributed positively to performance, with standouts being Inpex, Zimplats, Siemens, Intel and Johnson Matthey. Detractors included Neste, Hochtief and Continental.

The fund's significant outperformance of the FTSE World Index over the quarter was due to the strong performance of some of our Materials and IT holdings. Our lower allocation to Communication Services led to underperformance relative to benchmark.

The fund maintained underweight positions relative to benchmark in the Communication Services, Consumer Staples and Utilities sectors. The zero weight in Financials is a function of the Sharia screening mandate. Sectors the fund had overweight exposure relative to benchmark are in the Materials (Dupont De Nemours and Evonik Industries), Healthcare (Bayer, Johnson & Johnson, Pfizer and Gilead Sciences) and Energy (Neste and Inpex Corporation) sectors.

Our fund is mainly positioned in companies listed in developed markets, with exposure to a broad range of diversified sectors. Some examples of the global structural themes underpinning some of our holdings include an ageing population (hospitals, healthcare equipment), online disruption (e-commerce), tomorrow's workforce (automation and robotics), Food security (fertilisers, farm efficiency, alternative feed sources) and future energy and mobility (renewable energy, energy storage, components and consumables). During the quarter we added positions in Zimplats Holdings, Yara International and Ballard Power Systems. We sold out of our positions in Vale SA and Amgen Inc as they reached our fair values and we trimmed positions in Dupont de Nemours, Hella and Lyondellbasell Industries. We added to our positions in Siemens, Nisshinbo Holdings and Gilead Sciences.
